

Types of VERBS

- Linking verbs link the subject to more information. Being verbs can be linking verbs if they connect the subject to an adjective/ subject complement.
- Helping verbs assists the main verb and "helps" give more information about time and tense. Being verbs can be helping verbs if they connect to a main verb.
- Being verbs describe a state of being (am, are, is, was, were, will be, been, were, being) and can be helping or linking depending on the sentence.

Directions: Point to each verb in the chart and use it in a sentence.
