Directions:

Put on your detective hat and dive into the story! Can you hunt down all the sneaky prepositions hiding in there? Grab a pencil, circle each preposition you uncover, and underline the object of each prepositional phrase. Happy hunting!

Detective Max was the best detective in the whole neighborhood, even though he was only eight years old. One sunny afternoon, Mrs. Brown knocked on his door in a panic.

“Whiskers is missing!” she cried, worried about her fluffy cat. Max grabbed his magnifying glass and followed tiny paw prints through the yard, across the street, and into the park.

After searching the bushes, he finally found Whiskers curled up under a shady tree, purring happily. Max scooped her up in his arms and brought her back to Mrs. Brown, who gave him a huge hug and a plate of chocolate chip cookies.

“No mystery is too tricky for Detective Max!” he said proudly.
