Hyperbole In Poetry

Directions: Hello, poetry fans! It's me, Hyperbole Hazel, and today we're diving into poetry where hyperbole is used to make everything more exciting and fun! In the poem below, you'll see how I use exaggeration to tell the story of my grand adventure. Your job is to underline the hyperboles. Ready to rhyme with hyperbole? Let's go!

I climbed a mountain made of candy,
It was so sweet, it was too dandy!
I walked so fast, I even beat the wind,
It felt like I left the clouds behind!

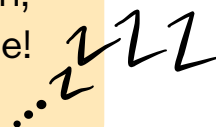

Then I found a river made of gold,
Its waters were so warm, I was bold!
I swam across with a single stroke,
I zoomed through the water like a boat.

Met a bear who was twenty feet tall,
He said, "I'm the biggest bear of all!"
We had a race, I ran very fast,
Crossed the finish line before the blast!

I ate a big lunch that weighed a ton,
T'was so big, I could never be done!
I took a nap that lasted a year,
Let's adventure again soon, my dear!

Which is your favorite hyperbole used in the poem? Why?
