Take Out the Hyperbole

Directions: Hey there, exaggeration experts! I'm Tuck, Hyperbole Hazel's pet toucan, and today we're flipping things around. Sometimes, hyperboles are fun, but other times we need to make our writing more realistic. Your mission is to find the hyperbole in each sentence and rewrite it in a way that makes it more literal. Read each sentence carefully. Underline the hyperbole first. Then, in the space provided, rewrite the sentence in a more literal way. Are you ready? Let's go!

My shoes are so old, they're practically from the dinosaur age! <input type="text"/>	I laughed so hard, I thought my stomach was going to explode! <input type="text"/>	This suitcase weighs a thousand pounds! <input type="text"/>
He's so tall, he can touch the stars! <input type="text"/>	The line at the amusement park was endless! <input type="text"/>	I was so embarrassed, I thought I would melt into the floor! <input type="text"/>
The fireworks were so loud, they could be heard on the other side of the world! <input type="text"/>	It was so hot outside, I could fry an egg on the sidewalk! <input type="text"/>	I've read this book a thousand times! <input type="text"/>
